Wow, what an incredible life. Makes me sad that this was the first I'd heard of her.

Also makes me recall the epic story of Dickey Chapelle, who I first heard of through an exhibit of photojournalist who died while covering the war in Vietnam - <http://digitaljournalist.org/issue9711/req1.htm>

Appropriate, though. After all, as far as the ones behind the cameras are concerned, they aren't the story.

Oh, and they're all crazy as weasels. I say that with the greatest admiration and respect.

thank you for linking this: I never had heard of her before, and now I'm crying because another brave star has gone out.

I need more stories like this of brave, strong, principled women.

That makes me sad, too.

There is now officially a shortage of Margrets and Margarets.

The world is poorer for the loss of her.

The best part of being your friend is that you introduce me to so many amazing people. Thanks.
